SUDI MAMPIR

ORIENTAL CUISINE INDONESIAN

By Hank Krastman, Ph.D.

In Indonesia John Rijken learned how to type on an old typewriter and when he started to work for an oil company as a shipmate and the boss found out that he could type, he was placed inside the office and never made it out to sea.

John served in the Dutch Army of which Indonesia was a colony at that time and in 1959 he came to the Unites States, and worked as a typewriter repairman for Underwood-Olivetti.

Later he started his own typewriter repair shop in Burbank which looked more like a tropical garden with birds, plants and a waterfall.

John always wanted to help people with natural medicine, so after 15 years he gave up the typewriter repair shop and became a practitioner of Oriental Medicine, working with acupuncture and other methods.

Recently John also opened with his (Psychic) wife Mimin an Indonesian Restaurant at 12728 Sherman Way in North Hollywood (818) 764-1892.

John said: '' How can I be a better Doctor, than to provide good Food.''

Yes, Sudi Mampir, does provide good Indonesian Food, including many vegetarian dishes and no pork.

Since both of them are healers and psychic's, you can talk about these things while having a meal and if you wish to have a healing or acupuncture, you can make an appointment.

They are open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily except Monday, dishes range from $5.00 to $9.00.

Recommended items are: Lumpia (Egg Rolls), Resaules (Chicken Rolls), Martabak (Quichelike Omelet), Nasi Ramas (Mini Rijsttafel), Chicken Satay, Steamed whole stuffed fish in a banana leaf, spicy shrimp in padang sauce, Gado-Gado (Salad), Bakmi Goreng (Panfried Noodles), Bihun Goreng (Thin Rice Noodles with chicken or Beef) and many other dishes.

Go see John and Mimin and experience a whole other side of the spicy food spectrum, while discussing Metaphysics or other interesting subjects!

The Mystery of America's Largest Prehistoric Earthworks

Monk's Mound today, is part of the Cahokia chain of mounds. For comparison notice figures of two climbers, nearing top.

by Grover Brinkman

America's largest prehistoric dirt pile, amazing Monks' Mound, is part of a long chain of ancient earthworks now incorporated into Cahokia State Park, in the floodplain of the Mississippi near East St. Louis in Southern Illinois.

Climbing to the top of this mound, 104 feet wide, 1000 feet long and 100 feet high, it might suggest a landing place for a space craft. It also suggests the slavery of thousands of people over a long span of time. Day after day, they carried earth wicker baskets on their backs, to build the mound. In so doing they created a large lake near the site. This movement of earth, from the deepening lake to the growing mound might be compared to dipping water out of a sea, using a drinking cup. The long years of physical brawn might also be compared to the labor involved in building Egyptian Pyramids.

To say that this sprawling archaeological site gets far less attention than it should is an understatement. The mystery is here. How large were the people? What degree of culture did they have? Why were the mounds built?

Only after a visitation here, checking out the many artifacts , does one realize the sites historical greatness, its mystery. Here time swings back to prehistoric man and a lifestyle that even today challenges the imagination.

Within site of Monks' Mound, the largest in the chain, is the large lake (Cahokia) scooped out of the floodplain by these prehistoric people, to get the needed dirt for the mound. Over and over, a treadmill of human slavery, day after day, in the heat of the summer and the cold of winter. Were they driven to do this, or did it of their own accord? And why? Did they visualize something from space, and was the flat top of the mound so fashioned to allow some space craft to land? Imagination knows no bounds as one stands on top of this mound.

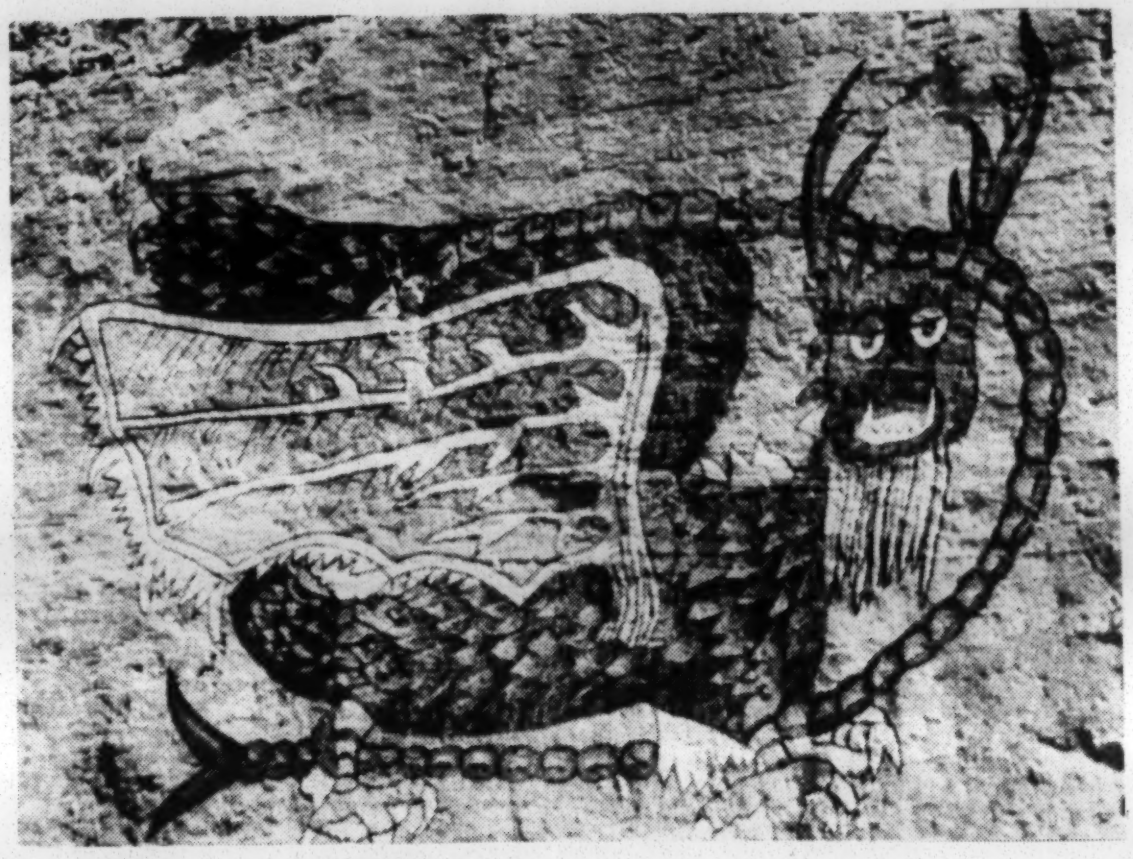

A nearby museum houses all the artifacts found on this site. Exploration goes on, year after year. The artifacts are far different from the usual run of arrowheads and tomahawks found in Indian exhibits. Remember, these mound builders were prehistoric. A high degree of culture is undeniable.

Named Monks' Mound by the Order of Trappists who built a monastery at its foot in 1809, this giant earthworks is one of 85 mounds still remaining in the Cahokia chain, stretching down the river. Once there were hundreds more, many of them leveled by the white man's plow and his earth moving machinery, before a halt was made, stopping the destruction. The Trappists, unaccustomed to these lowlands, and decimated by fever that rapidly thinned their ranks, moved out in 1813 and returned to their native France.

Anyone who visits the site asks the same question: Why were these huge mounds built?

Archaeologists at the site believe that some of them were ceremonial. Others were burial mounds.

Estimating the herculean effort needed to build Monks' Mound alone, a Cahokia Park ranger said it would take at least 2,000 people working continuously for at least two years to amass this giant pile of earth. Run that through your computer once more to implant the task in your mind.

Upriver from the mounds is this pictograph facing the Mississippi, on the bluffs near Alton, Ill.

Remember, also, that at the time that Monks' Mound was built, no less than 300 lesser earthworks were built by these same people, presumably between the years of 1200 and 1500 A.D. These mounds stretched along the Mississippi flood plain from a point above East St. Louis to Chester, Illinois, eighty miles downstream. Many of the lesser mounds today are slowly being eroded. The State of Illinois is making a heroic attempt to save those that remain.

The culture of the mound builders was much further advanced than the plains Indians who followed them. Their beads, flints, shards and other artifacts show this quite clearly. Skeletal remains show the people were of ordinary height and build

From the time of the early French to the new "Illini Country," the origin of the mounds sparked mystery and speculation. Superstitious pioneers believed that the region was cursed and refused to tempt the wrath of ancient gods by cultivating the land. Others who boldly ploughed these rich fields often upturned large caches of human bones.

Today the remaining mounds in the chain, of which Monks' Mound is the largest, are now protected within the confines of 144-acre Cahokia Mounds State Park, a national historical site. But outside the park there are various other mounds that are being destroyed by suburban sprawl.

The questions keep coming: What were these people like? How did they live? What was their degree of culture? What happened to them?

We've pedigreed the American Indian pretty well. He was here when the first white man began his explorations. But the prehistoric people are harder to pinpoint as to culture, size, color and lifestyle. The mystery grows.

These same questions were asked of the plains Indians when the first white man set eyes on the mounds. The answer was the same then as now--"No one knows."

Evidently the first white men to set eyes on the mounds were Joliet and Marquette, moving with the current on the Mississippi river. First their amazement was staggered by the sight of the Piasa Bird, a huge half-devil, half-man pictograph on the bluffs facing the river where the city of Alton, Illinois now stands. Then down river they saw the mounds, even more amazing.

The Great Pyramid of Cheops in Egypt is smaller than Monks' Mound. Also smaller are the Aztec ruins in Mexico. There is so much similarity between the Cahokia mounds and the works of the Aztecs that it undoubtedly was from that part of the world that these people came, bringing their religion, their priests, their maize and lifestyle. It is acceptable fact that they were not barbarous. Scientists now believe they numbered at least 150,000. But what happened to them to cause a complete wipeout?

Momentarily, one of the chief concerns of the park rangers is keeping itinerant motorcycle gangs from trying to climb the steep sides of Monks' Mound, an act which is prohibited. The mound is so steep that any possible erosion must be immediately checked.

Known throughout the archaeological world, these mounds are our greatest mystery. They cannot be accurately described by mere words: they must be visited, climbed and studied. A people, long dead, have thrown into our laps a mystery that perhaps never will be completely solved

WE ARE NOT ALONE!..... When in 1960 I started to write about my experiences with the Ley-Lines, the Vortexes, the Cosmic Energy Fields, the Van Tassel Integretron, the other dimensions, my research with the down syndrome people being able to see into this other dimension, the grid lines, my contact with the ''Man in Black-KOPAVI,'' the inner earth Hopi Indian City ''Paletkwapi,'' the Mysteries of Life and the many vortex connection points in the World (as confirmed by our travels) and on other planets, the Atlanteans, the Pleiades, Sirus, the Crystal Skulls, the fact that there had been a much further advanced civilization, the beginning of time with Amelius and the creation by extra terrestrials of our human race with the Komodo Dragon, the fact that the Free Masons claimed that their brothers built the Sphinx and the face on Mars, the power of the enenagram, and the Star of David and the Maze stone, I was laughed at and even kicked off the radio stations, and even today some people are laughing, however many scientists are now independently confirming the things I was talking about in those early years.

Most of these things were revealed to me as a member of the secret KOPAVI society of the Universe by the men in black, with which I still have contact and they are telling me that now the time is right!

Professor Porta and The Michigan Meteor

Professor Albert F. Porta was convinced the Earth was about to experience a great calamity. The San Francisco meteorologist predicted the cataclysm would occur December 17th, 1919- the result of an unusual juxtaposition of planets around the sun.

Mercury, Mars, Venus, Jupiter, Saturn and Neptune would align themselves on one side of the sun in the "greatest league of planets... ever known in the annals of astronomy." According to the professor, they would be "massed in the narrow limit of 26 degrees..."

Directly opposite- on the sun's other side- would be the planet Uranus. Earth would remain "outside the league, at an angle of nearly 90 degrees- in perfect position to receive almost the full force of the monster electrical disturbance" created by the planetary tug-of-war.

"the magnetic currents between Uranus and the six planets," warned the Professor will pierce the sun like a mighty spear. A gigantic explosion of gases would hurl masses of solar energy at the Earth. Canada and the United States, in particular, would b subjected to hurricanes, lightning storms, torrential rains, volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, floods and "Fearful cold". Porta told the press his intention was not to sensationalize or alarm, only to advise the world of coming events which his studies had revealed with "mathematical certainty."

Porta's scientific colleagues agreed: There would be a rare planetary conjunction in December; but they dismissed as nonsense his end-of-the-world prophecies. The conjunction would produce no catastrophes on Earth. December 17th, 1919 would not be Doomsday.

Millions of men and women in North America circled the date on their calendars anyway, and waited uneasily. Their unspoken fears were not allayed by the baffling events of late November.

Something exploded in or over, Lake Michigan on the night of November 26th 1919. Descriptions varied. The Coast Guard at Grand Haven asserted they had witnessed the descent of a "heavenly body." Astronomers said the heavenly body was a meteor.

Detroit, Michigan, November 27th, 1919:

That a meteor of tremendous size plunged into Lake Michigan last night causing earth tremors felt in a dozen southern Michigan cities and sending a pillar of flame hundreds of feet into the air, which was visible for a radius of more than fifty miles.

The theory generally accepted, was a terrific explosion at some industial plant.

From reports from various Michigan, Indiana and Illinois cities, where the blinding flare was visible, it appeared the center of disturbance was near the lower end of Lake Michigan.

The "meteor" did more than create earth tremors and a pillar of flame hundreds of feet high.

Chicago, Illinois, November 27th, 1919:

Scientists here today investigated a mysterious atmospheric and electrical disturbance which crippled telegraph lines, put electric light and power plants out of commission and smashed windows through a wide territory in the middle west last night. Slight earth tremors were felt in some districts. The disturbance was experienced most strongly through southern Michigan and northern Indiana, but was felt in Illinois and Ohio. One theory was that the phenomenon was caused by a large meteor, as electrical displays resembling the aurora borealis were visible throughout the affected area. At Hamilton, Indiana a ball of fire, described as resembling an automobile headlight, hung in the air for three minutes. Berrien Springs, Michigan were reported out of commission and windows were smashed in other cities. (Canadian Press)

Evidence to support the meteor theory was purely circumstantial. Except for the Grand Haven Coast Guard, nobody saw a fireball of "tremendous size" cross the territory affected or impact with Lake Michigan. There was an explosion: the earth shook, windows shattered and electrical communications were disrupted. A column of fire towered up so high it was visible for over fifty miles.

Residents of Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, South Bend, Grand Haven and other western Michigan cities fled from their homes in panic, fearing an earthquake. Houses were shaken and the country was illuminated as by a bright sun's rays so all-enveloping it was impossible to tell from which direction the glare came. The earth trembled half a moment, then came a deep, prolonged rumbling as of a terrific explosion. (The Border Cities Star, November 27)

Michigan's population was still reeling from the atmospheric disturbances, earth shocks and explosions when a storm with winds of ninety miles per hour swept the lower lakes. Seven people in the Detroit area were killed, and scores were injured by "falling cornices and signs, or flying glass." Houses and buildings were destroyed at Grand Rapids, Jackson, Port Huron and Saginaw.

At Richmond, the storm collapsed "a three-story brick business block." Telegraph and telephone wires were snapped disrupting communications so severely that twenty-four hours after the gale subsided only fragmentary reports of damage were available.

Canadian cities suffered countless thousands of dollars worth of damage.

Ingersoll, Ontario, November 30th: This is a debris strewn town today. At the factory of Ingersoll Packing Company the damage is estimated at from $10,000.00 to $15,000.00 Two thirds of the roofing of the cheese warehouse was blown off, while the entire west wall fell in. Many large trees on thee river flats were snapped off like pipe stems.

Stratford, Ontario, November 30th: Trees were blown down, windows smashed, awnings torn from their hangings, roofs blown off and in one instance, the top story of a factory was left a wreck of bricks and mortar...

Sarnia, Ontario, November 30th: The front of the Wellington Street School was blown in and the roof of the Free Methodist Church was lifted and carried a hundred yards, falling on top of the parsonage.

Woodstock, Ontario, November 30th: Trees were uprooted fences leveled, signs torn from their positions and thrown to the ground, and windows were blown in.

Toronto, Ontario, November 30th: One man was killed and several people were injured... It was one of the worst storms of the kind ever experienced by the citizens of Toronto...

Meteorologists blamed the storm on a low pressure area in the lower Mississippi Valley. One expert said it was so severe that it might circle the globe. Disciples of Professor Albert Porta believed the destructive winds were only a preview of things to come.

They waited.

The world waited.

In the following weeks, the Great Lakes' region suffered bitterly cold weather and a series of violent storms. There were two earthquakes in France and another in Alaska. But December 17th arrived and the Earth went right on spinning. A San Francisco newspaper commented: "End Of World Today Greatly Exaggerated".

Professor Porta issued a public apology, then hastily retreated into the ranks of meteorolgical nonentities. Editors decried "Prophets, seers, clairvoyants, fortune tellers and others of the calamity cliques." One journalist noted, "This business of the world dying is getting to be mighty monotonous...Astrologers, or star gazers, predicted the end of the world in 1186 and again in 1524. The old world escaped both of the threatened cataclysms, but the disappointment at escape did not prevent it dying again in 1881 and again at the appearance of Halley's Comet."

Now the year 1919 could be added to that list. Professor Porta, whatever his merits as a meteorologist, was obviously no great shakes as a soothsayer.

Yet.a nagging doubt persists: Something exploded in, or over, Lake Michigan on November 26th, something of such enormous power that it shook the earth, affected electrical communications and created "a pillar of fire." Hard on its heels came a tremendous wind and lightning storm which ripped through Michigan and Southern Ontario leaving death and destruction in its wake. After the wind storm came the severe cold, earthquakes and gales that claimed more lives on the Great Lakes.

Wasn't the pattern familiar? Hadn't Professor Porta prophesied those events weeks in advance? Could he have been an authentic genius who merely required time and opportunity to refine his formula to predict climate catastrophes with "mathematical certainty?"

Scientists will say it demands no special talent, magical incantation or formula to prophesy storms and cold weather for the Great Lakes' region in November and December. Earthquakes of varying intensities occur every day somewhere on Earth, as do torrential rains, cyclones, floods and volcanic eruptions, and yet, something exploded in, or over, Lake Michigan on November 26th.

Did a ball of solar plasma, produced by a rare conjunction of planets strike the lake?

A similar explosion in Siberia in 1908 is now generally conceded to have resulted from the collision of a comet with the Earth. Did a comet plunge into Lake Michigan on that November night?

Or was it an object even less probable and consequently, more intriguing? Did a machine, powered by an incredibly potent and volatile source of energy, enter the Earth's atmosphere- a machine from outer space, or inner space, from another dimension, or from the infinitely complex universe of Man's creative consciousness-and did it then explode and disintegrate?

Meteor? Solar Plasma? Comet? Machine? The answer may still be found beneath the cold, tempestuous waters of Lake Michigan.

The Mating Game: What Every Woman Should Know

Dr. Lyndon McGill, a practicing chiropractic physician in Salem, Oregon, observed in his practice "a correlation between the physical ills of his patients and their unhappy personal relationships."

Becoming increasingly aware of these problems between the sexes, Dr. McGill believed that "a new perspective that will allow" men and women to take responsibility for their lives and love was needed.

Consequently, he developed and directed a seminar, The Mating Game, from study and research he conducted on the "behavioral differences between the sexes." His new book, taken from the seminar, was designed "to teach people how to develop and maintain healthy and vital relationships."

The Mating Game is written primarily to women "as the stewards of their relationships" and because "more often than not...it is the woman who will seek and follow advice on how to improve the relationship with her mate." However, men should find this book very accessible.

The Mating Game presents straightforward, sound research-based information about the "facts of life" with excellent references to related sources. Additionally, Dr. McGill includes accurate, factual information on "the birds and the bees" to provide an intelligent, comprehensive treatment of these issues to increase women's and men's basic knowledge of these areas which critically impact relationships.

Sundial Press
$12.95 Paperback

"Most problems encountered in love are due to misunderstandings about life," says the author. It is his goal to help women and men acquire the tools they need to cope with these problems. The practical ways of achieving this goal, he says, will empower men and women to "become experts at the mating game" and thereby "extend our lives and increase our happiness."

The Mating Game has 20 chapters of the whys and hows to improve a relationship. Excellent diagrams give visual support to the narrative explanations and Dr. McGill writes with an encouraging and personal sharing tone.

The Mating Game rates high as required reading material for every woman and man whatever his or her current relationship involvement.

An investment in this practical book will yield positive returns in intimacy and the happiness everyone deserves in relationships.

Georg Feurerstein's latest: Holy Madness

How can you tell if the antics of "Holy Fools" are legitimate teaching tools, or simply the acts of self-indulgent lunatics? In their attempts to teach spiritual truths they jolt moral sensibilities with trickery, nudity, physical force, sex, drugs, and radical eccentricity. In Holy Madness: The Shock Tactics and Radical Teachings of Crazy-Wise Adepts, Holy Fools and Rascal Gurus, this universal dimension of spirituality is fully explored. Through detailed profiles, Georg Feuerstein examines the foibles and strengths of modern gurus G.I. Gurdjieff, Aleister Crowley, Bhagwan Rajneesh (Osho), Chogyam Trungpa, Lee Lozowick, and Da Love-Ananda (Da Free John).

Lynn Andrews' Mask of Power in book and tapes

Lynn V. Andrews' new book and cassette tapes, Mask of Power, have been designed as a training guide for men and women on the journey of discovery to their shaman self, working either individually or in a group setting.

The book and tapes richly complement one another but have been thoughtfully designed so that each may be used independently.

The book combines excellent background information about the process with multiple experiential projects, including the major focus task of constructing, as an act of power, a personal/individual shaman face of power. It will be, says Andrews, "like looking into a mirror in which you will be able to see your own unique truth."

The instructions are excellent, easy-to-follow, with step-by-step illustrations and a descriptive, detailed materials list for everything needed to make the mask. The mask, says Andrews, is "a tangible way to elicit the heart of your own truth and to unveil false personas."

The chapters of the book follow a sequential process of preparation much like an initiation leading up to, as well as following, the construction. Various activities are to be performed including very carefully designed tasks/rituals/meditations/journaling work which honor and acknowledge the significance of this profound process of discovering the sacred self.

The role of meditation in this process is primary and made quite powerful with the use of this set of six cassette tapes which are identical to meditation scripts included in the book.

Andrew's voice on the companion tapes conveys a power and confidence that establishes an atmosphere of complete trust for this profound journey. Her directions are perfectly timed, imaginative, and vivid, inviting the listener to participate in full partnership with her through use of the imagination.

The comprehensiveness of this well-integrated book and tape set will impress all who choose to use them, from novices just beginning to take personal responsibility for their spiritual evolution, to the wise and experienced crones always willing to take another step.

Eliott James' By Way of the Personal Path: The Continuing Journey Into Self Awareness

Eliott James, author of Attaining the Mastership and Living a Balanced Life, has authored his third book, By Way of the Personal Path: The Continuing Journey into Self Awareness, which is the story of his nearly 40-year personal odyssey.

The transformative energy of his story is powerful and unforgettable. Candid representations of human relationships are portrayed from a perspective that is refreshingly honest and always touching. James' description of holding his newborn daughter, rocking her at night and considering his role as a father is a magnificent portrait.

He has written a courageously forthright autobiography to "give something back to the continuous blessing of Spirit and God" he has experienced and to "assist others in taking another step on their spiritual path."

In the book's frontispiece, James describes the core truth his journey revealed: "Your personal path is not a spiritual learning or study; it is, instead, your total life."

Unconditional love and complete acceptance of oneself and one's life in its totality fills every page of this book. James encourages us to consider embracing the personal path to self-awareness regardless of where it has or does lead. This advice carries enormous weight coming from a person who has made what many would consider every mistake in the book.

Dhamma Books
$12.95 Paperback

He writes in the chapter, Acceptance of Self that "The realization of the Self is not one event or experience...We conceptualize self-realization as a singular, magic moment of enlightenment but actually it is a series of periods of deepening...actually the steps we take in our realization of God."

Many of the life events which James reveals are astonishingly painful experiences: childhood sexual abuse, a rigid fundamental religious upbringing, drug and alcohol abuse, prison and confinement in a mental institution, and unemployment. It is truly miraculous he could endure so much and become the person who was able to write this positive, inspiring new book.

In the telling of his story, James quietly emphasizes his awareness of the presence of God and Spirit that guided, protected and taught him wisdom lessons. From these experiences, he began looking within himself and recognized that the self-awareness process is unending and one in which active, conscious participation eventually develops.

In the chapter, Personal Study and Spiritual Exercises, James provides suggestions based on his own personal discoveries along his path that he found helpful. These include titles of books with ideas of how to use segments from them for meditation; six different words for chanting based on "the primary area of awareness that is affected and utilized" with instructions and explanations for their use; and, additional advice relating to "taking time for your self and exploring your relationship with God."

By Way of the Personal Path has exceptional wholeness to it. In it, James honors and acknowledges the metaphysical aspects of his personal path and from this comes the vital healing power of his book.

There is no denial of the painful truth of his life nor the joy, fulfillment and happiness. From this courageous stance, James offers this hopeful question: "If you find something greater inside than just a person in pain, what power does this Being hold to change this life? And, if you cannot yet recognize this higher Being within, do you chance believing that you will find it one day? Is it worth the risk of holding out and hanging on to the thread of hope that there is a purpose to this pain?"

Author Eliott James

From the the first page, it is almost impossible to put down this book. James' accounts of the people on his path are fascinating especially of his beloved grandfather. He writes of the many and varied experiences with beautifully poetic, dynamic passages that will be a wellspring of material for meditation, guidance and personal growth.

James' remarkable ability and willingness to write about every aspect of his life, many of which were "well beyond words," enables him to teach as he has and continues to be taught by his Inner Teachers with gentleness, honesty and compassion.

Living and trusting one's total life process is a challenge which Eliott James knows and shares in By Way of the Personal Path. This book stands as a witness for anyone struggling to make meaning out of pain. Eliott James has done it and created another wonderful book from that pain.

If you read and loved James' two previous books, get ready for this one! It will profoundly and forever change you.

Beyond Gurus: a woman of many worlds

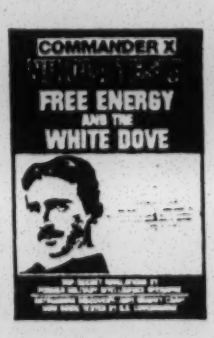

Beyond Gurus is Nancy de Herrera's personal and exciting story which parallels the growth and history of the meditation/spiritual awareness movement in the West. She captivates us with intimate tales of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi and his celebrity guests, including The Beatles, Mia Farrow and Mike Love of the Beach Boys. The author entertains with tales of exotic places, dangerous adventures, "gossipy" social chatter, and poignant anecdotes, such as her meeting with the Dalai Lama and her friendship with Greta Garbo. Most of all this is a story of courageous self-examination through devastating personal trials leading to understanding and spiritual growth.

James Allen's As I Think

As A Man Thinketh by James Allen is a best-selling classic that has inspired millions of readers with its message of how the power of our thoughts can affect our lives. Now this book has been written in the form of an affirmation, so that when it is read, the powerful thoughts become planted in our minds.

As I Think, arranged by Art W. Christensen, puts Allen's original message in first person affirmational style so that we re-affirm that the power of thought is not just for other people but for "me" and "my" life, for "I am literally what I think, my character being the complete sum of all my thoughts."

In one chapter we read: "Just as a gardener cultivates a plot, keeps it free from weeds, and growing the flowers and fruits required, so I tend the garden of my mind, weeding out all the wrong, useless, and impure thoughts, and cultivating toward perfection the flowers and fruits of right, useful, and pure thoughts. By pursuing this process, I discover that I am the master-gardener of my soul, the director of my life."

And in another chapter we are advised: "All that I achieve and all that I fail to achieve is the direct result of my own thoughts. In a justly ordered universe, where loss of equipoise would mean total destruction, individual responsibility must be absolute. My weakness and strength, purity and impurity, are my own, and not another's; they are brought about by myself, and not by another; and they can only be altered by myself, never by another. My condition is also my own, and not another's. My suffering and my happiness are evolved from within. As I think, so am I; as I continue to think, so I remain."

This is a classic to read and re-read!

Interpret your moon sign with the new Celtic Lunar Zodiac

Helena Paterson is a professional astrologer, member of the British Astrological Association and author of The Celtic Tarot. She has incorporated materials from the Celtic lunar zodiac, developed by ancient Druid priests into this excellent comtemporary interpretation, The Celtic Lunar Zodiac.

Water-color artist Margaret Walty has provided beautifully intricate and full-color illustrations of elegant, mythological interpretations for each moon sign with delicate full-color borders unique to each sign.

The distinct focus of this unique book is the incorporation of the "Druidic awareness of the natural and supernatural energies of the sacred tree spirits." For each moon sign illustration, there is an image of that sign's tree to highlight this significant and important influence in the study of signs.

Each moon sign chapter has an introductory title page which provides complete information relative to that sign. For example, The Birch Tree: Dec. 24 - Jan. 20, lists the Symbol: The Sun; Gemstone: Rock crystal; Flower: Daisy; Archetypal Character: Taleisin, bardic god; and motto: "I am a stag of seven tines."

The Celtic Lunar Zodiac is a jewel of a book, aesthetically as well as factually. It is an absolute necessity for a thorough interpretation of the signs and symbols of the zodiac.

The Erotic Impulse explores sensuality

The Erotic Impulse: Honoring the Sensual Self, edited by David Steinberg, is an exploration and celebration of our erotic capacities. This book is a wake-up call to the erotic spirit in all of us.

Drawing on the insights of counselors and the wisdom of poets, The Erotic Impulse serves up a feast of thoughts, feelings, findings and fantasies about our erotic nature.

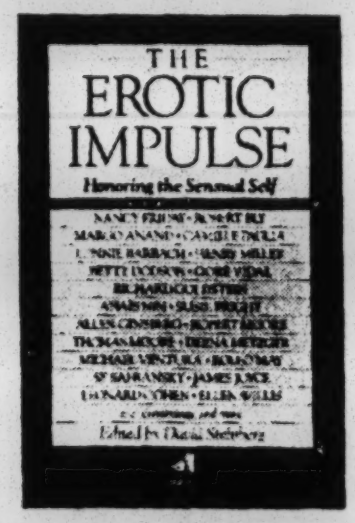

Contributors include Nancy Friday, Robert Bly, Margo Anand, Camille Paglia, Lonnie Barbach, Henry Miller, Betty Dodson, Gore Vidal, Richard Goldstein, Anais Nin, Susie Bright, Allen Ginsburg, Robert Moore, Thomas Moore, Deena Metzer, Rollo May, e.e. cummings, James Joyce, Ellen Willis and others.

Contributors examine how society denies and dishonors the healing power of Eros, leading to widespread feelings of fear, isolation, and inadequacy. Together they break the reader out of the prison of cultural stereotypes, opening wide the gates to a richer erotic life.

Topics include: differences in sexual attitudes between men and women, gays and straights; the role of erotic art and fantasy; pornography and censorship; and sexual spirituality and self-discovery.

The Erotic Impulse offers a liberating vision of human sexual potential for those who seek to expand and deepen this area of life.

Steinberg, author of Erotic by Nature and Father Journal, is active in feminist and men's movements, and leads workshops on men's roles, fathering, and male sexuality.

Artist conception of an initiation temple. The Anhk as a dimentional door can be seen in many of Corey's paintings.

Artist Corey R. Wolfe

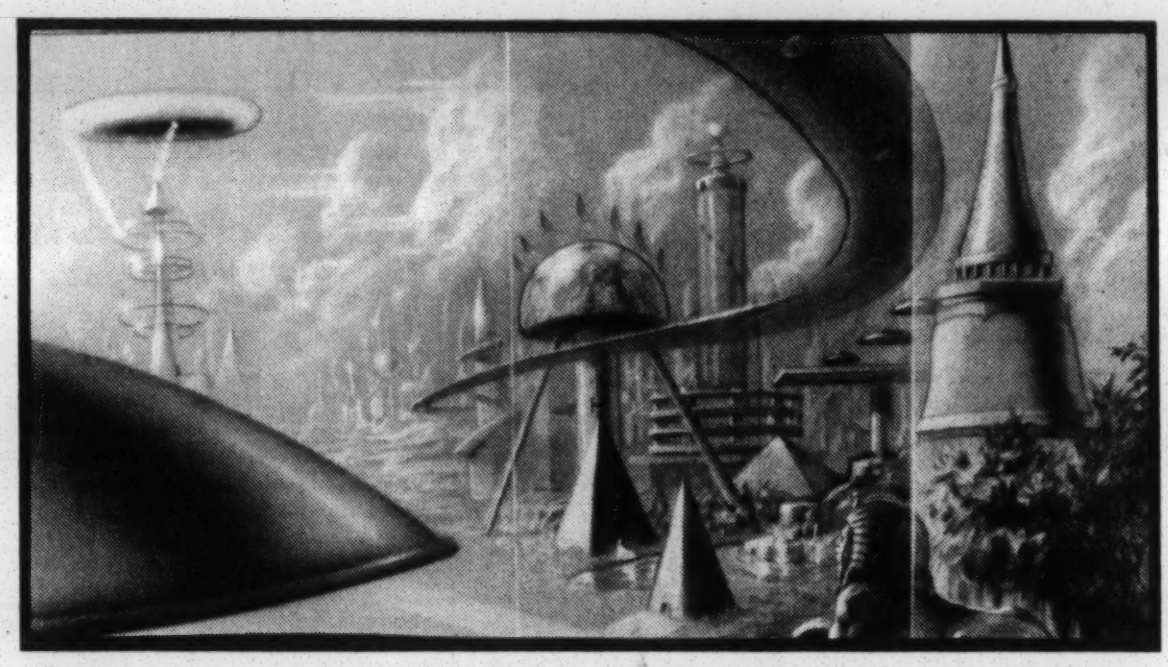

SPIRITUAL ART

by Hank Krastman,Ph.D.

Artist Corey Wolfe attended my lecture at the Whole Life Expo and approached me afterwards to buy one of my books.

It is my custom to write a short psychic message in the book, the message I perceived was:'' You will be very successful with your Egyptian style Designs.''

Vision of the inside of the Mother Ship with various Environmental control devices and power stations.

Corey proceeded to open his portfolio and show me his new art designs with the Egyptian slant.

The source is never wrong as we both noticed, and it confirmed that Corey was doing the right thing with his beautiful art. You can see some of his art and explantion on these pages, however the beautiful colors are lost in the black and white prints.

Corey Wolfe likes to transmit a message in his paintings and he said: "Intuition seems to be my guiding influence. My life has been a succession of strange and thought provoking journeys.

Intuition led me from being a sporting goods salesman in 1978, to being an artist in 1979. Art came fast to me, within three years I had 15 greeting cards on the market for companies like Paper Moon and Renaissance.

Since then I have moved to Fine/Commercial Art and a large portion of my work is for the movie industry.

I have done 80 video cassette box covers and painted for clients such as Time Magazine, Pepsi, Disney, RCA, 20th Century Fox, Universal, NBC, etc. too many to list. However at this time my main interest is visonary art."

Corey has recently signed up, to do a series of visionary greeting cards and posters and Corey feels that art should reflect an aspect of GOD, and speak to your Soul. It can be another way of accessing one's higher self.

"Ever since I remember I had a preoccupation toward the hidden side of life. I have spent a great deal of time investigating the subtle thoughts that creep into one's conscious mind and which are usually ignored.

For me these journeys within eventually revealed (or helped me remember) truths. These truths have been a beacon to me, guiding me along my path.

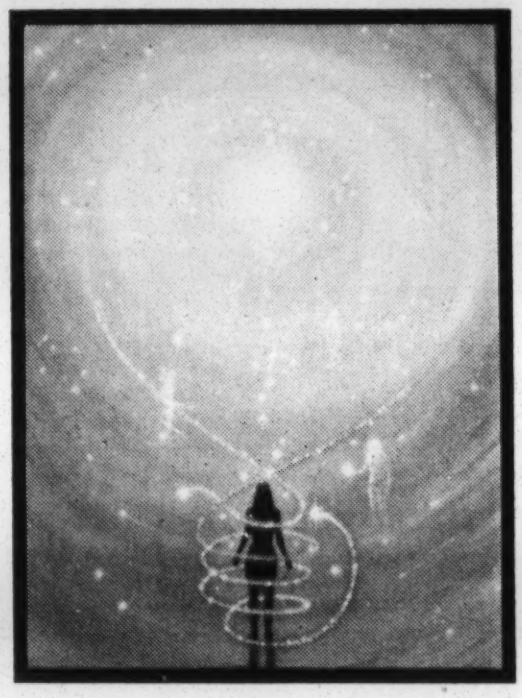

As you travel back to the IS, you will aquire your own best truths. Please use them for altruistic purposes only, because we are all in this together.

One day in the middle of a sketch, my hand wrote: KNOW THYSELF, NOW THYSELF, NO SELF!

I find it very important to think and meditate on the NOW! There is only the NOW and

Vision of light seen on another planet surface somewhere in the center of the Milky Way.

Near death experience in the tunnel of light.

since it's were we do our work, we should become very familiar with it. Try not to think of the past or the future for just 10 minutes, and you will see where you spend most of your time.

My current avenue of study, is the UFO field. Not from a nuts and bolts scientific direction, but from a cultural, philosophic point of view.

A lot is going by us or around us, we are too caught up in the diversions of the world, to actually notice.

The Eastern Religions call it Maya: Illusion. I feel that there are many kinds of illusion, such as advertising, politics, some religions, peer presure, the news and television.

All of these are means to make you think someone else's way.

If you choose to give up your free will, you only have yourself to blame, de-program yourself.

A past life memory.

People learn best from good examples, SO BE ONE!

Respect all life, everything is evolving, it all has as much right as you do, to fullfil its alloted time.

I once asked a teacher of mine what he thought the most important reason for living. He replied with three simple words:''To promote Life.''

So, listen to the quiet promptings in yourself, the truths are not found in the loud world outside, but within, in silence."

DANCING WITH DRAGONS?

The most widely known mythic beast in the World is the DRAGON, and it played a very important role in myth, art and religion.

St. George and the Dragon is one of the many legends around it.

The dragon is a fabulous beast, on the banners of the crusaders, on a quest for the Holy Grail and a good luck symbol in the Chinese and Merlin courts.

The real dragon started like a harmless little tree lizard manipulated in JAVA, Indonesia, known as the "flying dragon." It was four inches long and named a "Dragon Baby," the wings of a bat were skillfully sewn in place and as the story was told about this baby, it grew larger and larger in our World of Fantasy.

The fight of St. George was a triumph of Christianity over the Dark ages and places, and when the Dragon was killed a new and better Dragon would be born as the new guardian of the treasure.

This Treasure of protecting the LIGHT from the DARK Places, is now found at "DANCING WITH DRAGONS" Metaphysical Bookstore & Gift Shop, were the owners Lewis Baber and Susanne Nagle explain what is in this fantasy - Reality!

WHAT IS IN A NAME?

Once upon a time, a long, long time ago..... Dragons were Magical Creatures of Wisdom (a state that can only be attained when Life's Lessons have been learned).

But the World changed and somehow the Ancient Wisdom was forgotten, the Ways were lost, and the People lost sight of the True Paths.

The People started to fear Dragons. The fear grew and that was sad, because Dragons had not changed, only the People's perception of them.

Fortunately, the Infinite Wheel of Time has turned again and the Old Ways and Ancient Knowledge are being rediscovered in this NEW AGE.

The Mythical Dragons are still all around. Although they hatch as small helpless creatures, they can soon grow to enormous proportions.

They can not be neglected, pushed back into the dark corners of the World again or ignored. Without understanding, love or discipline, they can become very powerful and even overwhelming.

Let not the Way be lost again! Let us instead apply the Knowledge, Love and Light so we can live happily ever after..... and feel ourselves fortunate to be "DANCING WITH DRAGONS."

Come in and dance with us in the light or pick up a book of wisdom, a learning workshop, or some crystal at:
